

Six companies receive BLM awards

FARMINGTON — At the Four Corners Oil and Gas Conference May 10-11 at McGee Park, six companies received awards from the Bureau of Land Management.

The awards were for oil and gas field related reclamation, road work, watershed improvement and habitat development.

The awards and the companies receiving them are:

- Koch Exploration, for cooperative work in the upper Pump Canyon watershed.

- Burlington Resources, for contracting efforts in collector road improvements in the Hart Canyon and Largo Canyon road units.

- ConocoPhillips, for extraordinary environmental awareness during well pad reclamation.

- Williams Production, for contributions to fish habitat improvements in the Quality Waters of the San Juan River.

- Bill Moss Excavation, for extraordinary quality road maintenance services within six of the 14 BLM road units.

- Aztec Excavation, for exceptional efforts in reclamation.

- Burlington Resources, for cooperative work in the upper Pump Canyon watershed.

Above, Steve Henke, district manager for the Farmington District Office of the Bureau of Land Management, right, presents an award to Bill Moss of Bill Moss Excavation for extraordinary quality road maintenance services within six of the 14 BLM road units. At left, Chuck Smith, left, and Joanie Clark, center, of Burlington Resources, accept an award for cooperative work in the upper Pump Canyon watershed from Steve Henke, right, district manager for the Farmington District Office of the Bureau of Land Management. — Business Journal photos

Reprinted by permission of the Four Corners Business Journal.